Leader of CCR Connecticut
Joins Mahoney Sabol & Company

Glastonbury, CT | September 15, 2011 – Mahoney Sabol & Company, LLP, a regional accounting, tax and business advisory firm, is pleased to welcome Jay J. Rasmus as a new partner. Mr. Rasmus had been managing partner of the Connecticut office of CCR, LLP (formerly Carlin, Charron & Rosen), managing member of the CCR wealth management group and a member of the CCR Executive Committee.

“Jay brings tremendous expertise to our firm,” said James Mahoney, Managing Partner of Mahoney Sabol. “The needs of our clients continue to grow in size and complexity and Jay’s involvement will allow us to expand our current capabilities.”

Rasmus has nearly 30 years of public accounting experience, including ten years in a Big Four accounting firm (Ernst & Young). He also worked for DiSanto, Bertoline & Company, P.C. as the partner in charge of the firm's Entrepreneurial Tax and Consulting Division until the firm merged with Carlin, Charron & Rosen.

“As the trend of mega-regional firms taking over smaller firms continues, client satisfaction has been impacted,” Rasmus said. “I can now bring my clients value more efficiently because Mahoney Sabol has big firm expertise, but a smaller firm approach to service.”

Rasmus holds a bachelor's degree in accounting from Central Connecticut State University and a master's degree in taxation from the University of Hartford.

His areas of expertise include closely-held companies in manufacturing and high technology, construction, distribution, real-estate development, service organizations, and the wholesale trade, including individual, partnership and corporate federal and state income taxes, employee-benefit and retirement plans, estate planning, and taxation of foreign investments.

Rasmus is a certified public accountant and has also earned the Personal Financial Specialist designation.
